It has always been allowed. It serves 2 purposes. It reduces construction costs by eliminating the wall and allows for 6" of extra space in the backroom.

David,

The cooler/freezer are the only allowable backroom items to be seen, so it is OK to remove the wall offset in this instance instead of building a wall offset just to hide the cooler.

Justin,

If you take off the wall offset you will see the cooler. This is not allowed in the design scheme.

George,
Please leave as designed.
